Police charge four in AT&T armed robbery

Howard County police have arrested four people in connection with an armed robbery of an AT&T store in Ellicott City last week.

Justin Hosea Snow, 21, his brother, Johnny Devon Snow, 19, their cousin Taylor Yvonne Snow, 22, and Arkeene Antoyne Redditt-Abrams, 24, all of Baltimore, each face various counts of armed robbery, robbery, conspiracy to commit armed robbery, assault, use of a firearm in commission of a felony and other charges.

Police were called to the 9000 block of Baltimore National Pike on June 17, at approximately 1:10 p.m., for a report of an armed robbery. Three suspects, two with guns, entered the store with their faces covered and confronted two employees. The suspects stole cell phones and cash and fled. No one was injured. Police learned that a fourth unknown male suspect, wearing pink pants and pink shoes, had come into the store shortly before the robbery, looked around and left without making a purchase.

Video surveillance from a nearby business showed a person matching the fourth suspect's description, wearing pink pants, and three other suspects getting out of a gray Toyota Corolla parked near the AT&T store just moments before the robbery.

Through investigation, police identified the three Snows and Redditt-Abrams as the suspects. Detectives learned the Toyota was involved in a traffic stop in a neighboring county the day before the robbery. All four suspects were together in the car during that stop.

During the investigation, detectives also found a profile picture on Facebook of Redditt-Abrams wearing what appeared to be the same pink pants matching those worn in the robbery.

Redditt-Abrams and Johnny Snow are being held at the Howard County Detention Center on $150,000 bond each. Justin Snow was released on $150,000 bond. He and Taylor Yvonne Snow were apprehended June 24 in Mechanicsburg, Pa., in connection with a robbery of a T-mobile store. Extradition is pending.
